What's New in the?

We would like to introduce Canvas X, an application that has been designed with one goal in mind: to allow you to take advantage of the power of a desktop computer to create powerful presentations. Unlike other applications, the real power of Canvas X is that it allows you to put a large variety of images, text and other objects in the canvas and have them be editable in the same way as in any other app such as PowerPoint. This means that when you open the file in Canvas X, you can be sure you're not locked into a standard, predefined way of presenting, but have the freedom to create your own visual story. The process is a breeze with Canvas X. Simply take the file into the app, select the relevant images and place them onto the canvas, then go to work editing them the same way you would in PowerPoint. Using the integrated tools, you can add shapes, effects, lines and much more. The app has a simple and intuitive interface that will allow you to do everything you need to within minutes. The user can choose to edit a text in the Canvas or input text directly in a separate text area. In addition to these two options, the user can copy or cut/paste objects between the different windows. Have a text open in Canvas X and then open a Power Point presentation. Simply copy and paste the relevant objects in PowerPoint and you're done. Unlike most other applications, Canvas X lets you customize the look of objects by placing them on the canvas and simply dragging and dropping them where you want them. This is possible with nearly all objects including text, images, shapes, diagrams and more. Each object in Canvas X has a fair number of properties, and they can all be edited by dragging and dropping the object in the area that corresponds to it. For example, if you are creating a presentation that needs a table, all you have to do is drag and drop an object from the palette into the canvas. You can place objects with or without their properties, and you can have several objects on the canvas.
