Earlier today, a group of more than 170 drummers descended on the Sydney Harbour Bridge to protest against the proposed Adani Carmichael coal mine. At least three groups of drummers have taken part in what is the largest single-day drum protest in Australian history, highlighting their opposition to the coalmine in Queensland. Ric Devereaux, an Indigenous leader from the south coast, spoke about the peaceful nature of the protest and the death of Fred Henry, e79caf774b

There were several feelings going through my head after watching the International Champions Cup final and Super Bowl between Manchester United and San Francisco 49ers. San Francisco's triumph over United and their fans was shocking for many reasons. This defeat should not have happened. As the game developed with nothing on the line, few expected United to lose. They had six starters from the victorious Champions League final, as well as one of the season's best players in Eden Hazard. The game was set up for San Francisco to win by a minimum of three points, and four points to be safe. However, the 49ers, ironically, won by a single point. The final score - 6:05 p.m. Pacific time in the final seconds of extra time - was 17:37; there were 2:43 in stoppage time, and San Francisco scored first after a brilliant long range shot from C.J. Beathard went over Tim Melia's outstretched hand. United were reduced to 10 men when Chris Jones pulled out the card for Alejandro Bedoya for shoving Jones. Desperately, United tried to score but the equalizer never came. United's first goal came from
