It all starts with a strategy, something that's lacking in just about every group, no matter what kind of organization it is. Follow this advice and you'll be on your way to more appealing updates, better connections, and more Facebook likes. 1. Plan, Plan, Plan. Take some time to think about what you want your group's Facebook presence to look like. Is it something that is appealing and inviting? Do you want to share pictures from your events, along with some relevant content? What do you want to communicate? Once you've settled on a plan, make sure to have it approved by your group's admin and to make copies of the original plan for each member. You'll want everyone on the same page and this is the best way to ensure that happens. 2. Make it Easy. Nobody likes a complicated Facebook page. It makes it harder for people to know what your group is about and to join. Many groups have complicated pages with tons of HTML code and other such things that aren't a good representation of a group in its entirety. Make it easy for people to find what they're looking for by using a clean look with a clear layout. You can use a number of software tools to make this happen, including WordPress, Divi, Beaver Builder, and others. 3. Be Consistent. Consistency is key to a Facebook presence. This is especially true when it comes to regular event photos. You'll want to include a few in your group's Facebook profile. It doesn't have to be a photo from every event, but it should be something that lets people know you're hosting an event. It should be something that's organized and appealing, so they'll want to show it to their friends. Related Post […] all important for a group's community. You're going to need a Facebook page, so you'll need to 1cdb36666d
