Physiological and pharmacological approaches to the study of sexual conflict in Drosophila. Sexual conflict arises when different mating tactics are employed by males and females of a given species, which can lead to one sex obtaining a reproductive advantage. In many species with haplodiploid genetic systems, the female sex acts as a specialized investment of caretaker for the next generation. Females invest in maximizing the likelihood that their progeny will survive and pass on their genes. While this may render males prone to alternative mating tactics that help guarantee their paternity, and the potential for genetic conflict arises, a number of scenarios may be beneficial for females. In this chapter we review the evolutionary literature on sexual conflict over mating tactics and investment in Drosophila. An illustrative review is presented of the ways in which courtship and mating in Drosophila have been studied as both an evolutionary and comparative context. We conclude by discussing the general prospects for studying sexual conflict in other species with haplodiploid sex determination systems. the same, and it could be the quickest of the four in the same situation (if the enemy engages) or the longest (if the enemy disengages). - Best strategy is to stay and buy time, while having a good tank crew. - Your job is to get your small recon vehicle in-front of the enemy mechs.

"Merit", as defined in Johnson, is related to the nature and complexity of the issue involved and the time and labor required, but not to the amount of money which a litigant is willing to pay. In this case, by way of his Complaint, Plaintiff is seeking damages in the amount of at least $18,000. As indicated above, the "cost" to a litigant of defending a lawsuit includes the emotional toll of defending the lawsuit and being castigated for wrong doing, the time and expense of court attendance and the time of the clerks and assistants of the court. Moreover, a person is entitled to be considered innocent until proven guilty. In situations where Plaintiff is unable to meet his burden of proof and the Defendant is deemed innocent of wrongdoing, Plaintiff can not recoup his loss. The costs of "costs" are simply part of the package which a litigant *1331 buys when he takes the case to court.
