Drishti a true feel of Punjabi movies and life.Q: How should I deal with unethical, racist colleagues? I am a generalist/MBA. I have worked for several big companies and also small companies who pay well and are non-union. At two companies, I had a great supervisor. She was incredibly helpful and made the job so much easier. Then she left the company and I was given a new supervisor. He was an associate, old enough to be my father, and treated me like I was his pupil. In reality, his job was to find better candidates for me to interview. He made me do the boring work; things like data validation, as well as writing the specs. He wanted me to give him reports on new hires so he could evaluate them. I worked at one of these two companies for 3 years, he was my supervisor for a year, then he gave up the position as a boss in favor of making more money. As a result, the company had a low morale, so he called in his "management" to help. The problem is, we get as far as reorganizing office furniture before he starts throwing around terms like "nigger" and "chink". There is also one employee I have only worked with on the internship I did this summer. He is an Asian in his mid to late 30s. He has had previous jobs. I have only worked with him on this

In addition, he is very hostile to the OP and me. He has told me that he will not hesitate to punch me in the face if I'm even one centimeter away from him. He has been told by his boss to leave, but he hasn't. It was a very bad situation and I have to look at it as a learning experience. If I told my company, they would fire me for sure. My question is what should I do? The first two companies 6d1f23a050
